ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A developer container detachably mountable to an image forming apparatus includes a first accommodating portion for accommodating a developer to be supplied to the image forming apparatus, the first accommodating portion having an opening at one longitudinal end thereof; a second accommodating portion for accommodating a material collected from the image forming apparatus; wherein the first accommodating portion is provided with a driving force receiving portion for receiving from the image forming apparatus a driving force for rotating the first accommodating portion to feed the developer in the first accommodating portion toward the opening; wherein the first accommodating portion its supported by the image forming apparatus at the one longitudinal end and rotatably supported by the second accommodating portion at the other longitudinal end.

Sub A11